Good afternoon,

I am writing about signing up to the electoral register.

You have sent me now two letter saying I need to provide evidence (lots of evidence) that I am who I am, in order to sign onto the electoral register. This is false. You are incorrect.

You have said I need multiple pieces of information of why I need to do this, rather than taking my information I have already provided as prima facie.

I would also like you to know that it is not a criminal offence to provide false information to the council - and I do not appreciate the manner in which the letter was sent. I also do not trust that you only use this information for electoral purposes. For what reason do you need 4 pieces of evidence to sign up to the electoral register and therefore am not going to provide it?

If you refuse to sign me up to the electoral register with the information I have already provided I will be taking this further.

Good morning,

Thanks for your reply.

Having checked the record I can see that you didn't provide your national insurance number when you applied to register to vote, which means we can't verify your identity. This is why we have requested documentary evidence.

You don't need to provide evidence from each type. Just one Type 1 document is enough (i.e., passport or driving licence). This can be provided by email as a photo if that's more convenient.

Hello,

I will come down to the council offices over the next few days so that they can verify my identity. I do not trust the electoral register with my data.

Thank you

So i guess that means I can now turn up and vote? As I can show my ID on election day.

Good afternoon.

Hello,

Once you're registered to vote you'll be able to vote at your polling station on polling day. You'll need to provide ID when you do so.

So, if there were an election tomorrow, and I turned up - I would be refused a vote?

Hello,

Only people who are registered to vote can cast their vote. However, even snap elections are planned with weeks in advance, so people who are not registered have plenty of time to become registered.

Therefore can you please inform the Electoral Commission that I am eligible to vote in my present location, so that they may update the their records. If asked to provide photo ID on the day of an election as per the Election Act of 2022 - I would be happy to do.

Hello,

Thank you for your query.

The Electoral Commission oversees electoral regulation, but they do not manage elections or the electoral register. They do not have access to the electoral register in Southwark or anywhere else, and therefore they are unable to update any records.

Regarding voting on polling day, all electors are now asked to provide ID when they vote in the polling station. The poll clerk will check their name against their list of registered electors. If someone isn't registered to vote, they won't be able to cast their vote. These checks are designed to maintain the integrity of elections.

Thank you for clarifying. As it is the council who maintains the full Electoral Register, could you please provide a list of all the non-departmental bodies and private corporations who can access the electoral register, and the data contained within?

There is a separation between the council and the elections, and the performance of its duties within this existing framework.

On an election day, would I be able to get an emergency ballot, if I had not been registered in time by Southwark Council?
